About the Book

"Recent Trends in Humanities, Literature, Sociology, and Psychology (Volume 3)" is an interdisciplinary anthology that captures the dynamic developments shaping these foundational fields of knowledge. As part of an ongoing series, this volume builds upon previous scholarly contributions by examining new directions, contemporary debates, and critical insights within the humanities and social sciences.

Spanning a broad thematic spectrum, the book features essays that address pressing issues such as cultural identity, gender dynamics, mental health in the post-pandemic world, technological influences on literature and society, and the changing landscape of social relationships. It also includes critical literary explorations of classical and modern texts, with an emphasis on relevance to present-day socio-political realities.

The sociological studies in this volume engage with questions of inequality, migration, education, and the structure of institutions, while the psychological analyses delve into behaviour patterns, cognitive processes, trauma, and emotional well-being. This integrated approach allows readers to draw connections across disciplines and gain a more holistic understanding of the challenges and opportunities of modern life.

Intended for students, educators, researchers, and general readers with an interest in the humanities and social sciences, this volume serves as a valuable resource for keeping pace with the evolving academic and cultural landscape of the 21st century.

Preface

The disciplines of Humanities, Literature, Sociology, and Psychology offer rich, interconnected insights into the human condition. As the world undergoes rapid socio-cultural, technological, and psychological transformations, the need to re-examine long-standing theories, practices, and perspectives becomes increasingly urgent. This third volume of Recent Trends in Humanities, Literature, Sociology, and Psychology is a continuation of a broader academic initiative to capture these evolving paradigms and critically engage with emerging issues that shape our societies.

This volume represents a collaborative effort by scholars, researchers, and practitioners from diverse backgrounds. It reflects a commitment to interdisciplinary dialogue and the exploration of new theoretical frameworks that respond to contemporary challenges. The chapters included in this volume range from critical literary analysis and cultural studies to nuanced explorations of identity, mental health, social behaviour, digital transformations, and the intersectionality of marginalised voices.

We extend our sincere gratitude to all contributors whose rigorous scholarship and innovative thinking have made this edition possible. We also acknowledge the academic community that continues to support and engage with this evolving body of work.

This volume aspires to not only document current academic debates but also to inspire future research and encourage deeper inquiry into the core aspects of human experience.
